OUR HISTORY

Henry Gardiner applied for a license for a hotel on the White Bull site in January 1880.
It was to be called the Western Railway Hotel and incorporated eight bedrooms in addition to those required by the publican's family. In 1881, the hotel was advertising its new sensation, "Loaf of Bread and Cheese", which was served daily from 10am-1pm with a glass of beer for six pence.

In 1889, the hotel changed its name from Western Railway Hotel to Railway Hotel. Sadly, the original hotel was destroyed by fire in March 1919, and a new Railway Hotel was built on site in mid-1920.

The old wooden building was removed from the current site in 1994 to be replaced by the Railway Tavern, to now the White Bull Tavern we have today.
